

Langley Designs bespoke manufacturing capabilities were on full display for the amazing Adair Project working with Bowmer + Kirkland. High quality, modern and stylish were the design aims for this bespoke seating. Langley Design set to work designing a product that could hit the brief and the finished products were exactly what was required. A new flat leg design was created alongside a modern twist on a traditional armrest, Iroko was chosen as the Timber species due to its quality, all metal elements were Galvanised and then Powder Coated to give it that extra superiority. The client was really keen to incorporate both benching and seating elements alongside providing enough spaces for passers-by to rest, eat and socialise. The bench/seat combination were provided at various lengths and the finishing touch was to engrave Capital & Centric Logo into the top slat to let everybody know whose seats these are.
